SILENT SCREAM This eerily powerful message is what remains of Bayug Island after mangrove swaddlers from the Marikina River swam through it early Saturday morning at the height of Tropical Storm "Sendong." A slice of Barangay Hingapian, 3.7 kilometers northwest of the Iligan City peninsula, Bayug is considered the first Christian settlement in Iligan City. Before Saturday, it was home to 341 families. Only 194 families have been accounted for. The rest are missing and feared dead.

'Sendong' disaster foretold 3 years ago

By Kristine L. Alano

THE TRAGEDY that struck the cities of Cagayan de Oro and Iligan was an event waiting to happen. It was foretold three years ago, but was dismissed by lawmakers as "too abstract."

Jose Ma. Lorenzo Tio, chief executive officer of the World Wide Fund for Nature-Philippines (WWF), said, "It was an event that was foretold."

Marshall Water Services Inc. and Smart Communications yesterday said they had sent out 2,000 tons of bottled water and 300 five-gallon containers of potable water to the flood victims in Cagayan de Oro City. An additional shipment of 2,000 pieces of 1.5-gallon

P1.3-billion calamity fund ready

THE NATIONAL government, lawmakers, other provinces and Cebu City are sending financial aid to the cities of Cagayan de Oro and Iligan and other areas devastated by Tropical Storm "Sendong."

At least a P1.3-billion calamity fund "will be released immediately" to help ease the plight of the victims of the storm, Budget Secretary Florencio B. Aldeguer said yesterday.

"We are ensuring the quick release of those funds so that victims will receive swift and proper assistance," Aldeguer said in a statement.

He said that with the fund, the government "is generously equipped" to stabilize and support disaster relief efforts in Cagayan de Oro and Iligan as well as other affected areas.

CAGAYAN DE ORO CITY—Guillermo Uriarte hung on for dear life as he swam then floated on a wave of mud that carried him from his flood-devastated riverside home in Cagayan de Oro to Macajalar Bay off the coast of El Salvador 20 kilometers away.

He was barely breathing when rescuers plucked him from the sea. He said the "biggest" he had started to swim at 3:15 a.m. At some point, he said he was carried away by the current and reached El Salvador 12 hours later.

North Korea's Kim Jong-il dies; world wary

PYONGYANG—North Korea on Monday announced the death of its supreme leader, Kim Jong-il, and urged its people to rally behind his young son and heir apparent, while the world watched for signs of instability in a nation pursuing nuclear weapons.

South Korea put its military on high alert as it faces the North's 5.2-million-strong military. UN President Ban Ki-moon agreed by phone with South Korean President Lee Myung-bak to closely monitor developments and co-operate.

In a special broadcast on Monday from the North Korean capital, Pyongyang, state media said Kim died on a train on Saturday due to a "grave mental and physical strain" during a "top-secretary field inspection."

"It is the biggest loss for the party... and it is our people and nation's biggest sadness," an anchorwoman clad in black Korean traditional dress said in a voice choked with tears.

A Jesuit priest reacts to the Ateneo School of Government "Independent report" recommending a blanket moratorium on mining

'Aanhin pa ang damo kung patay na ang kabayo?'

by FR. EMETERIO BARCELON, SJ

"What future are they talking about? Are they talking of the future of the 20 million citizens of the country who are food hungry today?... Maybe I would not mind deferring decision on mining if we had no hungry mouths to feed."

MANILA, Philippines — Half-page advertisements in Manila dailies appeared recently purporting to be research "objective and peer reviewed." But who are the peers who reviewed it? What is their valuation of so-called research? It is safe to presume their peers were academics and not mining entrepreneurs. Can the Ateneo be proud of such research? (Puzzling is the need to pay for advertising space to publicize their opinion)

That the Ateneo School of Government should recommend a policy from true ivory tower fashion is within their rights. And no one can question the need for cleansing dormant and defective applications for mining applications. However, to recommend a blanket moratorium on mining from supposed national incompetence is unbelievable.

To accept such a recommendation to be of any value would be true incompetence. Our legislators have mulled over our mining laws for many years but specially the last 30 years. The rationale for this position is that "the country is not yet capable of accurately measuring the real benefits and costs of mining."

Have other countries been able to accurately measure the costs and benefits of mining (or of industrialization, or for that matter of agriculture, of exports and imports, or a host of other concerns of the economy)? The authors claim to be "a team led by me" but they do not sign the advertisement and hide behind the name Ateneo.

It refers to the "school's extensive work in mining in the last five years." What mining has the school of governance done? Maybe what is meant is ivory tower theorizing on the mining industry. Maybe they have done that but that is a weak argument for stopping a whole industry. And who are they to pontificate on mining just because they think the country is incapable and so effete that it is not even capable of consulting other countries that have mining industries?

They accuse the government of limitations in accounting to verify benefits and warn against "gambling away our future." What future are they talking about? Are they talking of the future of the 20 million citizens of the country who are food hungry today? Or are they trying to reserve the gold in the mountains for the future of the rich Filipinos to the time when they will be able to do the mining themselves rather than foreigners? These foreigners are providing jobs to feed the poor. Are they equating the hunger of today to a nebulous potential future of rich Filipinos? Maybe I would not mind deferring decision on mining if we had no hungry mouths to feed.

Are we so incompetent and effete that we cannot enforce our laws in responsible mining? That is the premise of the advertised opinion of the Ateneo School of Government, Ubinam gentium sumus? The hungry I see today but the future mining prosperity of well-to-do Filipinos that we are supposed to be gambling away I still have to see. How extensive or meager are our mineral resources from their research? Have they done any geological quantitative evaluation of these?

True, we need to "build capacity for governance of responsible mining." As they use to say "Aanhin pa ang damo kung patay na ang kabayo?" What do we need mining governance if the Filipino has died of hunger because of our pausing and incompetence? Incompetence and lack of logic is not insurmountable (except perhaps in ivory towers). To such evaluation of national incompetence I do not subscribe.

Tests show pressure to be stable; experts to give recommendations to SC

NO LEAKS have been found so far on the 117-kilometer-long Batangas-to-Manila white oil pipeline owned by the Lopez-led First Philippine Industrial Corp. (FPIC) following the conduct of pressure tests last week.

Energy Undersecretary Jose M. Lopez Jr. said engineers yesterday that during a 48-hour-long monitoring period with the start of the pressure-controlled leak test last Wednesday, pressure in the pipeline was found to be stable.

"It's not unlike inspection of monitoring wells located in various places along the pipeline, we have not seen any leaks," he said.

According to him, the Department of Energy (DOE) will continue to monitor the pipeline until next week and then after.

Lopez explained that they wanted to monitor the pipeline for three days to ensure that the results would be more "definitive."

How much would you spend to be fit?

By Mitch Fudge, President
 Coordinator

HOW MUCH money are you willing to spend to achieve the strong and lean body of your dream? There are some guidelines to help you start your journey where you are, your health and fitness objectives.

Know your goals well, measure them.

• Would you like to lower your blood pressure, eat your five, fifteen cups, build more muscle and gain a strong training class without giving up, or have more calories while enjoying an hour of morning dance class?

• How much weight would you like to lose by next year? Studies show that the more conservative rate of weight loss is at least 10 percent of your starting weight in six months (or less) period in three months).

• How much do you compare weekly, per year? How much savings do you have now? Estimate your total expenses for this year and for each of your target goals as you would have an idea about your budget next year.

• Set a monthly budget for your fitness expenses like food, groceries, transportation, bills, rent, entertainment, self-care, clothes, travel, children's needs, and your health and fitness.

The budget will depend on your income, lifestyle, needs and target savings. If your monthly income is P20,000 and your monthly expenses are P15,000, you can still allow a budget for your fitness lifestyle by cutting back on unnecessary expenses, and engaging in affordable fitness programs that suit you.

The zero-P1,900 plan

Walk or jog outdoors 30-45 minutes on most days of the week, preferably a total of at least 150 minutes per week. Walk around of taking a walk, and you can save P100 for a few kilometers distance ride.

Do body weight exercises at home or at your local club on 20-30 minutes at least twice a week to improve strength and functional fitness. If your company has a corporate fitness center or wellness program, use it.

Buy a fitness video or book with credible fitness experts to consult with a fitness expert on a monthly basis for your fitness program.

Just giving up your daily high-calorie coffee drinks or sweets can already help you save an average of at least P1,000 per month. Use this money for a monthly membership fee for a reputable health club or a good pair of running shoes.

The P2,000-P3,900 plan

Join a health club so you can try all the latest group fitness classes that are already improving your overall fitness. Full-body resistance training classes, dance and cardio-based classes including indoor cycling, full-body classes like yoga, Pilates or bootcamp classes. Join the personal training and nutrition classes so you can have a monthly program guide.

If you plan to ride the train or long-distance road trips, get a qualified fitness training coach who can train you at least once a week, and give you a weekly fitness and nutrition program you can do on your own the rest of the week. With this budget, you can already register to a more advanced rate of your desired fitness.

Design and create your own fitness plan if you choose to work out on your own. I recommend that you get one to two pairs of dumbbells (P1,000-P2,000), an exercise mat (P500-P1,000) and a walking belt or cushion (P500) and a service with a fitness consultation (P700-P1,500) who can come to your house to design your program.

Limiting or eliminating "extra food" with extra calories, such as beer, chips, chocolate, processed foods and canned, bottled flavored drinks, can really help you save P2,000-P3,000 (plus the cabinet) per month. To plan your grocery list and choose only "real healthy food" like lean meat, chicken, poultry, seafood, whole grains like rice, rice, vegetables, fruits and eggs.

The P5,000-P9,900 plan

Sign-up for a structured monthly group session at a fitness studio of your choice offering yoga, dance, circuit workouts and bootcamp classes. These studios offer free trial sessions and charge changes if you get health results or cannot commit. If you prefer to exercise at home, buy your basic fitness equipment set (P2,000-P4,000) and hire a personal trainer to come to your house at least once a week, a week (average of P600/week). Trainers usually follow a comprehensive training device (P500-P1,000) that can be incorporated into your body weight workout.

Get back on dieting and prepare and cook food at home. The rate was P4,000-P9,000 per month just by limiting your dining out in once a week or twice a month.

The P10,000 and above plan

Buy your own cardio equipment (P10,000 and above) like an indoor bike, treadmill or you just want to work out at home, coach who can train you at least once a week, and give you a weekly fitness and nutrition program you can do on your own the rest of the week. With this budget, you can already register to a more advanced rate of your desired fitness.
